How would you live if you thought you were going to die?

Meet Jill Hollander

Jill Hollander is a speaker, certified life and health coach, and writer who inspires those around her to recognize their courage, reframe their challenges and reinvent their lives.

By recognizing her own innate fighting spirit and conviction at a very early age, Jill has established herself as an authority on authentic confidence and unparalleled resilience. Simultaneously using the power of her own story to empower people to find their YES in every facet of their lives, Jill helps people around the world gain perspective and boldly claim what is truly important. Born with a congenital heart defect that required a heart transplant before her high school graduation, she has since had not just one, but six, triumphant responses to every Lymphoma diagnosis, each one only deepening her determination to rise above, to honor the transitions and to actively craft a life of purpose. Whether speaking to individuals about the importance of not just prevailing, but thriving, in the face of adversity, to corporations about building resilient teams within their organizations, Jill is living proof that we don't have to simply play the cards we were dealt. We have the power to use them to win the game.

Why Jill?

Jill offers a variety of tools and strategies that foster mindset shifts, create self-advocacy, and build resiliency. She understands that, no matter the circumstance, there is always a full-body YES! to be found. Her gift is turning potential obstacles into opportunities. Why? Because she's done it and she knows the power- and freedom-that come with tapping into authentic confidence.

Jill has risen above extreme medical diagnoses, surgeries, and life events, each one deepening her resolve to LIVE rather than merely survive. She has actively built a life filled with what matters most to her: love, travel, fun, career-being very conscious of the choices she makes. Jill has established herself as an authority on authentic confidence and unparalleled resilience. Using the power of her own story to help people around the world gain perspective and boldly claim what is truly important.

Jill consistently delivers inspirational talks that empower attendees to reevaluate their priorities, eliminate what no longer serves, and shift their mindsets to ones of confidence and resilience. Whether speaking to individuals about thriving in the face of adversity or to corporations about building resilient teams, Jill is living proof that we have the power to use the cards we're dealt to win the game.
